This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE Public will please to observe, that this book is confined to the facilitating the acquirement of the words of the French language, and, therefore, no notice is taken of the theory of the Verbs, the Syntax, Pronouns, &c., these departments forming part of the rudiments of the language, as simplified, on the same plan as the Latin and Greek, for the especial use of Mr. Hall's pupils.

PREFACE.

THE object of Mr. Hall's System of Education is, to enlarge and improve the mental faculties of youth, and, by bringing into action all the powers of the intellect instead of confining them to the cultivation of memory alone, to communicate the knowledge of foreign languages in such a manner, as not only to cause them to be acquired in a very short space of time, but to be ever after retained in the mind.

During the many years that Mr. Hall has been engaged in communicating instruction to Adults, he has had abundant opportunity of observing the baneful effects produced by superficial instruction in early years—he has found his pupils well stored with rules, but wholly incapable of accounting philosophically for one of them—he has found them capable of translating such passages, here and there, as they may have happened to remember, but totally unable to make out those they may have forgotten, or have never seen before: —above all, he has found them lamentably deficient in all the legitimate objects aimed at by classical knowledge.

It is not altogether fair to attribute this incompetency to neglect on the part of Schoolmasters, who necessarily must have an interest in the advancement of their scholars; it may, with more correctness, be traced to the injurious practice so universally pursued in schools, of cultivating almost exclusively the powers of the memory, and making its effects the test of intellectual improvement. Mr. Hall is therefore desirous of awakening parents to the importance of solid, rather than showy attainments; to impress upon them the necessity of estimating their children's advance rather by quality than by quantity; and of forming their judgment thereon, not by simply ascertaining what author a boy is reading, but whether his progress be the effect of a clear and accurate perception of principles, or only a preposterous exertion of the memory. It need scarcely be observed that it is one thing to commit an immense mass of matter to the memory, and another thing to retain it through life.

The extraordinary success which has attended Mr. Hall's System as applied to the Latin language, forcibly proves the great advantage to be gained by directing aright the reasoning powers. As this is fully set forth in the Preface to Mr. Hall's Principal Roots of the Latin Language, he has caused it to be reprinted in the present work, for the information of those who may wish to refer to it: it may here suffice to say, that the observations therein contained, relative to the common mode of communicating a knowledge of Latin and Greek, equally apply to the mode of teaching the French, and indeed, all other languages.

One great feature which mainly distinguishes Mr. Hall's mode of communicating foreign languages from all other systems at present known, is the imparting the words of the whole language, or at least the great body of them, previously to entering upon translation: the result of which is, that his pupils, after accomplishing this part of the course, are enabled to read whole volumes, while others are struggling over a few pages.

This part of Mr. Hall's course, as applied to French, possesses another very important advantage, which will be duly appreciated by those who wish to acquire that language for the purpose of familiar intercourse. It is notorious, that nine persons out of ten, who can readily translate a page of French, nay, an entire work, into English, are nevertheless wholly incapable of expressing themselves in French. But by acquiring the words of the language previously, and being able to return the French for each English word with the same facility as the English for each French word, Mr. Hall's pupils are enabled, in the second month, not only to translate French into English, but to retranslate the English into French; the habit of which fits them, in a short time, to speak the language with fluency.

Mr. Hall begs, in conclusion, to say, that he has for a very considerable time been exclusively occupied in preparing the books necessary for his system, not only in the Latin and Greek, but in all the modern languages, and in making extensive arrangements for the general diffusion of his mode of instruction; and, from the avidity with which the particulars of his system have been sought after abroad, particularly in America, Germany, and France, and the anxiety that has been evinced for the publication, in those countries, of the books connected with it, a reasonable prospect is afforded, that, at no very distant period, a rational mode of instruction will be generally substituted for the laborious, and, indeed, superficial course, which hitherto has been almost every where pursued with youth.

PREFACE TO THE PRINCIPAL ROOTS OF THE LATIN LANGUAGE.

Lest Mr. Hall's System should be confounded with others which have lately been brought before the public, it is necessary that a few words on the subject should accompany the present publication.

Mr. Hall has for many years been occupied in simplifying the mode of instruction in the Latin and Greek languages; and, after considerable experience in the course which he conceived to be alone calculated to accomplish two most important, but, at the same time, widely different objects, viz. solidity of instruction, and rapidity of acquirement—he found that the space of three months was quite sufficient, under his system, to communicate to adults such a knowledge of the Latin language as would enable them to translate any Roman author with ease and pleasure to themselves—a degree of competency rarely acquired, and still more rarely retained, by those who have spent most of their youth in toiling through the classic page.

The knowledge obtained by his pupils, in that short space of time, having been found to be of a nature so much more profound and permanent than that acquired in the usual scholastic course, several distinguished characters, who had witnessed its effects, strongly urged Mr. Hall to a more general diffusion of his system: he was therefore induced, about the spring of last year, to commence arrangements to that effect; and accordingly he has been preparing for the press, in the form which appeared best calculated for public utility, the manuscripts which he had till then used only privately for the accommodation of his pupils.

Having thus determined on giving publicity to his system, Mr. Hall was anxious to introduce it to the public in such a manner as satisfactorily to prove its efficacy. With this view he resolved to ascertain the shortest possible space of time in which an adult, by devoting his entire time and attention, could acquire the rudiments of the grammar, and be able to undergo a public examination in translating, parsing, and scanning the whole of the first book of Virgil's Æneid. This trial he commenced with a gentleman who was well versed in English grammar, but not acquainted in the slightest degree with Latin; and such is the superiority which can be gained, in acquiring language, by cultivating and directing aright the reasoning powers instead of relying on the memory alone, that at the expiration of only seven days, he found his pupil qualified to meet the proposed examination.

Mr. Hall then requested the attendance of several literary gentlemen for the purpose of ascertaining, by personal examination, the progress of his pupil. This examination accordingly took place in the month of April, 1824, in presence of about twenty gentlemen, amongst whom were some persons of distinction, who, having heard of the circumstance, had expressed a wish to attend on the occasion; and as most of the gentlemen who attended were altogether sceptical as to the possibility of so extraordinary a progress in so short a space of time, the consequence of that scepticism was a most rigorous and incessant examination of his pupil, by each of them, for upwards of two hours, in all the most difficult passages.

Few of those gentlemen had expected to hear more, at the most, than a mere translation of the book in question, and the pupil's ability, in that respect, they very naturally attributed to the possession of a powerful memory: their astonishment was therefore proportionably increased, when, after proceeding some way in the examination, they heard nouns declined, verbs conjugated, the derivation and composition of words explained, the various cases accounted for by the rules of syntax, and the lines accurately scanned.

At the close of the examination, every one of the gentlemen present expressed his full and perfect satisfaction at the knowledge acquired by Mr. Hall's pupil, and urged, in the strongest terms, a speedy and general diffusion of the system.

It has before been observed, that the communicating such a knowledge of Latin, in so limited a space of time, was only intended for the purpose of proving what was possible to be effected by a properly directed course of instruction. Mr. Hall, however, cannot but acknowledge that such a circumstance may still be incredible to those, who recollect the drudgery they themselves underwent before they arrived at a similar proficiency: and therefore, though his regular course for communicating a complete knowledge of the Latin language occupies from three to four months*, yet if any public characters, who may be interested in the promotion of classical learning, should be desirous themselves of ascertaining the practicability of such a progress, he is willing to repeat his labours with any other fit individual whom they may select for that purpose; and, as he has still by him the selection of roots which are applicable to the first book of Virgil's Æneid, he is ready to do so at any time within one month after he may be called upon.

On the 8th of May following, Mr. Hall delivered his first lecture to a very numerous assembly of literary gentlemen, at Willis's Rooms, when the result of his experiment was publicly commmunicated. He then very fully explained the principle on which his system was founded; and entered largely into the nature of memory, in order to show that it is through an immoderate and injudicious application of it, with too little exercise of the reasoning faculties, that the acquirements of youth in Latin and Greek, not only consume so great a portion of juvenile existence, but are so quickly forgotten in after life.

It is a fact as incontrovertible, as it is deplorable, that, comparatively, very few of those who have employed eight or ten years of their youth in acquiring Latin and Greek, ever, in after life, attempt to peruse the classic page, either for amusement or instruction; much less do they attempt to explore the treasures of knowledge, which are to be found in classic authors, which do not happen to be amongst the number read at school or college. Now this is not altogether attributable to any distaste to those languages (though it must be confessed the course they have undergone in learning them is highly calculated to produce it), but on the contrary, to an absolute incompetency to read them.

This incompetency in the far greater number of those who have studied Latin and Greek, sufficiently proves the inefficient nature of the common course of instruction; for if it were solid, it could never be forgotten:—it also proves the evanescent nature of mere memory, when not directed by the judgment.

Mr. Hall's great ambition is to substitute substantial information for visionary acquirements—to ensure the communicating Latin and Greek in such a manner as, not only fully to attain the legitimate objects aimed at by classical learning, but to implant that knowledge so firmly in the mind, that it shall remain an imperishable acquisition to the latest moment of life.

Rapidity of progress may to many persons seem, at first sight, incompatible with solidity of instruction; and permanent retention incompatible with rapidity of progress;—but those, who analyze the nature of the human mind, its powers, and its combinations by means of association, will perceive that these important advantages are the natural results of clear perception, and properly directed judgment:—for, when we clearly perceive and comprehend the principle, end, and object of any thing, we readily acquire all that is dependent on it, and our knowledge remains an acquisition for life;—whereas, on the contrary, when we attempt to acquire any particular knowledge without inquiring into and ascertaining philosophically its principle, nature, and use, our acquisition is merely an acquisition of the memory, burthensome to the mind and useless to the possessor.

INTRODUCTION.

By the principal roots of the French language are to be understood those only which produce the great body of the language, but such has been the nature of the selection, that when these, together with the derivatives which follow, shall have been learned, a pupil will scarcely at all require to consult his dictionary.

It is proper here to observe, that a considerable portion of the roots of the French language, like those of the English, can only be found in those other languages from whence it springs. This circumstance has necessarily swelled the quantity of words introduced in this book, and has occasioned a slight deviation from the plan observed in Mr. Hall's work on the Latin roots.

Amongst the words classed as similar to English, will be found some which present to the eye but little similarity, such as épice, étoffe, étage, état, école; it is therefore to be observed, that the hissing sound of the letter s not being agreeable to the French ear, the letter e is frequently substituted when it begins a word, and, therefore, by restoring the s in those cases, the English will be apparent, as in the above, spice, stuff, stage, state, school.

It is also to be observed, that when a circumflex occurs in the middle of words, as in mât, maître, plaître, apôtre, it marks that the letter s is omitted; by supplying it, the English will be apparent, as mast, master, plaster, apostle.

Some words will be found amongst the roots, under the head "similar to English," which strictly are derivatives, or compounded with prepositions, as admettre, to admit; permettre, to permit, &c.: it is here proper to state that they have been so placed, because a knowledge of the composition of words, which are similar to the English, could not add to the facility of acquiring them.

As more than one-half the words in this book are similar to English, and about fifteen hundred are simplified by means of association and derivation, there are little more than four hundred words out of the whole fairly chargeable on the memory; and even of these latter, those, who happen to be acquainted with Latin, can materially reduce the number, a very great portion of them being derivatives from that language, as naufrage from naufragium, gemir from gemo, fremir from fremo, &c.

At the end of the book the words are arranged in line, for the convenience of rehearsing, in a different form, each page, as soon as committed to memory. The French must be read out in English, and the English in French.

The following explanation of the marks and abbreviations, formation of plurals, feminine of adjectives, &c. are to be noticed attentively.

Marks and Abbreviations.

congruity] from grue, a crane, comes the word congruity, compounded of the preposition con, together, and grue; cranes being remarkable for their regularity and uniformity when flocking together for the purpose of migration; hence also incongruity, i. e. not agreeing or assimilating.

rowel] from roue, a wheel, comes the rowel of a spur, literally a little wheel; hence also comes to roll, a roller, &c.

glaciers] i. e. immense mountains of ice in Swisserland.

to degrade] the preposition de is mostly used negatively in French, much the same as un in English, as lier, to tie, *de*lier, to *un*tie; thus to degrade is literally to *un*rank a person.

vague] from vague, a wave, comes the word vague, i. e. uncertain, unsteady; thus in English from wave is derived to waver, wavering, &c.

alert] i. e. upon the wing.

tuileries] from tuile, a tile, comes the name of the royal palace at Paris, the Tuilleries; so called because its site was formerly occupied by a manufactory of tiles.

cerate] i. e. a medicine made of wax.

tester] i. e. the head of the bed.

*para*chute] a machine similar in form to an umbrella, contrived for the purpose of descending from a balloon when at a considerable height, and which by resisting the air renders the descent very easy; whence its name, compounded of the Greek proposition παρα, against, and chute, a fall.

flowing] fleuve, a river, is derived from the Latin fluo, to flow; whence flowing, flood, &c.

gambols] from jambe, a leg, comes gambols, i. e. games or tumbling tricks played with the legs.

soldier] from solde, pay, is derived soldier, i. e. one who serves in the wars for certain pay.

verger] an inferior officer who carries a wand.

vaccination] vache, a cow, is derived from the Latin vacca; whence vaccination, i. e. the inoculating with a virus or matter taken from a cow.

fletchers] i. e. arrow makers, from flèche, an arrow. This name is retained by one of the London companies, the Bowyers and Fletchers.

to broach] from broche, a spit, comes to broach, i. e. to pierce a vessel in order to draw the liquor; hence figuratively to broach a new subject, i. e. to give it forth.

the mail] so called originally from malle, the trunk or portmanteau in which the letters were carried.

Pomona] the goddess of orchards.

Unicorn] a fabulous animal used in heraldry, having one horn.

vinegar] vinegar is compounded of vin, wine, and aigre, sour, literally sour wine.

the Louvre] the Louvre, at Paris, said to have been anciently a hunting-seat of the kings of France, standing then out of the town, and the wolf being their principal game, from thence obtained the name of Lupara, from the Latin lupus, whence the French loup; and afterwards by corruption of the original name became Louvre. Some will have it that it is called the Louvre (i. e. l'ouvre, the work) by way of eminence, the architecture being considered so perfect; but the former appears the more classical history of its name.

vermicelli] vermicelli is properly an Italian word with a diminutive termination derived from the Latin vermis, a worm, whence the French ver, and signifies literally little worms, such being indeed its exact appearance.

or] or is a term used in heraldry to express "of the colour of gold."

to endorse] dos, a back, is derived from the Latin dorsum, whence to endorse—i. e. to write on the back.

a buoy] from bois, wood, comes a buoy, a log of wood that floats over the anchor to show where it lies; this name is also applied to large painted barrels which are anchored in rivers and near the coast, to direct a ship's course through the proper channel.

ANCIENT POETRY and ROMANCES of SPAIN. Selected and Translated by JOHN BOWRING, Esq. Post 8vo. price 10*s.* 6*d.*

"A critical knowledge of the national poetry of Northern and Western Europe, and an admirable command over the poetical language of his own country, have justly placed Mr. Bowring at the head of our modern poetical translators. It is not long since he transplanted a knot of fresh and blooming flowrets from the snows of Sarmatia. This was followed by a collection of tulips from the low levels of Batavia. The little volume now before us is a chaplet still more beautiful and fragrant from the romantic regions of Spain. The volume has high merit and value as a collection of specimens illustrative of the Spanish character."

Eclectic Review, Sept. 1, 1825.

XVI.

The IDENTITY of JUNIUS with a DISTINGUISHED LIVING CHARACTER established. Including the SUPPLEMENT; consisting of Fac-Similes of Hand-writing, and other Illustrations. The Second Edition, corrected and enlarged. Printed uniformly with Woodfall's Edition of Junius, and accompanied with a fine Portrait, and five plates of Hand-writing. Octavo, price 14*s.* boards.

"That it proves Sir Philip Francis to be Junius we will not affirm; but this we can safely assert, that it accumulates such a mass of circumstantial evidence, as renders it extremely difficult to believe he is not; and that, if so many coincidences shall be found to have misled us in this case, our faith in all conclusions drawn from proofs of a similar kind may henceforth be shaken."

Edinburgh Review, No. 57.

The VISION, or HELL, PURGATORY, and PARADISE, of DANTE ALIGHIERI. Translated by the Rev. H. F. CARY, A. M. With additional Notes, a Life of the Author, and an Index. In three vols. octavo, price 1*l.* 16*s.*

"Of all the Translators of Dante with whom we are acquainted, Mr. Cary is the most successful; and we cannot but consider his work as a great acquisition to the English reader. It is executed with a fidelity almost without example; and though the measure he has adopted conveys no idea of the original stanza, it is perhaps the best for his purpose, and what Dante himself would have chosen, if he had written in English, and in a later day."

Edinburgh Review, No. 58.

"——Mr. Cary's translation—the best we ever read of any work.——"

Quarterly Review, July, 1823.

By the same Author,

The BIRDS of ARISTOPHANES, translated into ENGLISH Verse, with Notes. Octavo, price 9*s.* 6*d.*

"The elegant translation which is the subject of our article may be said to stand unrivalled. It is to the full as vigorous and spirited a copy (and this is no scanty praise) as any of Cumberland's, and in the choral parts it far transcends him."

Eclectic Review, Sept. 1824.

"The elegant and faithful translator of Dante may aspire, without the least presumption, to the difficult triumph of translating Aristophanes; and if a great compass of poetic language, with a laborious study and thorough knowledge of the original, can qualify an English writer for the enterprise, Mr. Cary may advance these, and more than these pretensions."

Monthly Review, Aug. 1824.

The AGAMEMNON of ÆSCHYLUS, Translated, with Notes Critical and Explanatory, by JOHN SYMMONS, Esq. A. M. of Christ Church, Oxford. 8vo. price 8*s*.

"Mr. Symmons has not only performed his task with Herculean vigour and great success, but has, moreover, entitled himself to the gratitude of Greek students by the admirable notes affixed to his version." Monthly Review, Feb. 1825.

XX.

SYLVAN SKETCHES, or a COMPANION to the PARK and the SHRUBBERY. With illustrations from the Works of the Poets. By the Author of the FLORA DOMESTICA. Octavo, price 12*s*.

XXI.

FLORA DOMESTICA, or the PORTABLE FLOWER GARDEN; with Directions for the Treatment of Plants in Pots, and Illustrations from the Works of the Poets. The Second Edition, corrected. Octavo, price 12*s*.

"We are disposed to bestow our warmest commendations on works which, like the Flora Domestica, are adapted to excite an interest in the study of botany, by showing that flowers, as well as quadrupeds and insects, have their biography,—their literary, as well as their natural history,—their moral character and local attachments, and physical habits, as well as their medicinal virtues. The charm of this volume lies, however, in the rich poetical illustrations with which the horticultural and botanical remarks are enlivened. These will please all lovers of flowers and lovers of poetry, whether residing in town or country; and the author has shown both taste and industry in selecting and arranging them.

Eclectic Review, October, 1823.

TOURS to the BRITISH MOUNTAINS, with the Descriptive Poems of Lowther and Emont Vale. By THOMAS WILKINSON, of Yanwath, Westmoreland. Post 8vo. price 8*s*. 6*d*.

"The subject is worthy of the highest talents, and the author has produced an amusing volume." Critical Gazette, Oct. 1824.

JOURNAL of a TOUR in FRANCE, in the Years 1816 and 1817. By FRANCES JANE CAREY. Octavo, price 14*s*.

"Mrs. Carey is a lively and intelligent traveller, with keen powers of observation, and a full resolution upon every occasion to judge for herself. The chief merit of her journal is the accurate details which she gives of the peculiar habits and manners of the people, as they present themselves to the eye of an English traveller at the present day; and she has more particularly directed her remarks to the appearance and condition of her own sex. The descriptions of the country are in general spirited and clever."

New Monthly Magazine, Aug. 1823.
